5. Security

The purpose of this Security Plan is to ensure that Brussels Homecoming is executed in a manner that enables all participants to enjoy the entertainment and social aspects, while maintaining a safe and secure environment. This will be done through a collaborative approach between all Security partners: Homecoming Volunteers; Professional Security Apparatus; and OPP personnel. This collaborative approach will require constant communication between the partners to address issues as they arise. Homecoming Security should be kept informed of all issues, as appropriate.

Our approach is that everyone is attending Brussels Homecoming to have a great time and we want to facilitate this in every way possible. At the same time, we want to take a proactive approach in removing personnel whose attitudes, actions and activities no longer contribute to this atmosphere. As a result, our security partners will need to balance these two equally important values, noting that safety and security will always remain paramount. Security partners are expected to take an approach that is proportional to the above mentioned attitudes, actions and activities of individuals to remove them from the premises; their final disposition will be determined by their actions and state, after Security and OPP consultations.

As in past homecomings, the commitment to and requirement for security has increased.
